

Bed Bugs and Resale Shops

According to the Association of Resale Professionals, there are more than 25,000 resale stores in the US generating approximately $16 billion in revenues annually. Many accept upholstered furniture, upholstered chairs, draperies, and other household linens. There are a number of steps these locations follow before placing such items on the floor for purchase, including treatment for bed bugs and fleas.

In addition to traditional resale locations is a network of establishments belonging to the Furniture Bank Association of North America. Members of this association share a common mission to provide furniture at little or no cost to families struggling with poverty and other severe life challenges.

The SHARING CONNECTION in Downers Grove, Illinois, is a member of the Furniture Bank Association of North America and has embraced the use of LIGHTS OUT Bed Bug Killer as part of its intake procedure for prevention, cleaning, and inspection. LIGHTS OUT prevents worker exposure to toxic ingredients, is effective, sprays easily on surfaces, won't stain, dries quickly and has no odor.

“ We just finished our first four gallons and we love the product.
No smell is a big selling point.
We are now advertising that we use the product on our website. ”

Ryan Varju, Chief Operating Officer
